1) Reading Comprehension :

It was a cold , wet Saturday in November, and I was driving home from work when I saw a young girl standing by the side of the road . It was terrible weather, so I stopped and offered her a lift. ‘Thanks a lot,’ she said. ‘You’re the first person to stop and I’ve been here for hours!’ ‘Where are you going?’ I asked. She laughed and replied, ‘somewhere very cheap – I don’t have much money.’

She told me her story . Katy was from the USA. The day before , she had set off on her round-the-world trip . England was her first stop, but as soon as she’d arrived in London her money had been stolen. She was going to collect some more money on Monday when the banks opened . Until then she had to find cheap accommodation . I believed Katy’s story, so I offered her a bed for the night . ‘Gee, thanks,’ she replied. ‘I was getting worried about where I could stay!’ We arrived at my flat and I made up the spare bed, gave her something to eat , and lent her some money. She thanked me and we spent the rest of the evening talking about the States and places she could visit in England.

The next day I got up fairly late and noticed that the front door was open. ‘That’s strange,’ I thought, then suddenly I realized. Katy had gone , and so had my wallet.

II) Language

1) Circle the correct alternative. (3)

I'm seventeen and my life is terrible. The problem is that my parents are always telling me what to do! Last weekend, my father made me stay in on a Saturday night and do my homework. And just because I failed a couple of exams. I'd already arranged to go out with my friends, so I had to (phoned, phone, phoning) them up and explain. It was so embarrassing!

. And then my mother is always telling me what kind of clothes I should buy. I bought a new dress (last, next, this) week, and when I told her the price she started shouting at me. She said that I shouldn't have bought it – it was too expensive. I wouldn't (minding, mind, to mind), but my mother spends a fortune on her hair.

. But (worse, the bad, the worst) thing happened yesterday evening. It was my birthday recently, and my parents (have bought, are buying, bought) me two tickets for an Oasis concert. I wanted to take my best friend with me, but they made me take my (thirteen-years-old, thirteen-year-old, thirteen years old) brother. What can I do?
